

SINGER'S WOOLING ENDS IN CELL

Pretty Grass Widow, Who Found Black-Eyed Balladist Irresistible, Causes His Arrest When Romance Is Blasted Forever.

"SINGLE" MAN, BUT IS CLAIMED BY A WIFE.

Missing Diamonds, Sweet Songs, Moonlight Nights, Detectives and Fainting Woman Features of Williamsburg "Thriller."

James Oakley is a concert singer and pours forth lovely ballads while a stepladder throws touching illustrated pictures on a screen. James is thirty-one, and is, according to the statement of Mrs. Minnie Pasco, of No. 110 South Fourth street, Williamsburg, popular with the fair sex.

Notwithstanding that he is a concert singer and a gay Lothario, the tuneful, black-eyed ballad singer is accused of appropriating Mrs. Pasco's worldly goods, and on this account he was arraigned in the Lee Avenue Court, Williamsburg, to-day on a charge of grand larceny and was held for further examination. Now he is suffering from nervous shock, all due to the awful denouement in his love affairs and the terrible disgrace of being dragged into court.

Just Couldn't Resist Him.

James' arrest was brought about in a dramatic manner. Mrs. Minnie Pasco, a beautiful grass widow, young and charming, who up to a few days ago lived at No. 38 Wythe avenue, caused it.

Last summer Oakley was singing at North Beach. Mrs. Pasco says he sang "perfectly lovely," and when he warbled "Good-by, Little Girl, Good-by," and "The Man of Aching Heart," she just couldn't resist him. In the course of North Beach events the fascinating ballad-singer met Mrs. Pasco.

He told her, says the pretty grass widow, that he was a single man, and that his name was James White. From that time on Mrs. Pasco never missed a song at North Beach, and in the interim between the fascinating ballad singer's public appearance he spent much time at the Pasco home. Next, says Mrs. Pasco, they became engaged, and, oh, she was so happy until three weeks ago "White's" visits suddenly ceased.

Mrs. Pasco took an inventory of her personal effects and found that she was shy two diamond rings valued at $300, a big roll of taffeta from which she was going to make a ruffled petticoat, a shirtwaist and other feminine bits of apparel, together with a silk umbrella. "White" had given her only three weeks before. The pretty grass widow forgot the delightful evenings at North Beach and proceeded to tell her troubles at the Lee Avenue Police Court, where she secured a warrant for her "White's" arrest.

Widow Sets a Trap.

This morning, while she was thinking of her quondam sweetheart's perfidy, there came a ring at the bell, and to her surprise she found "White's" smiling countenance greeting her. Mrs. Pasco smiled back, and pretended to be delighted to see him. She invited her to sit in the parlor, and she and the morning papers, and asked him to entertain himself while she fixed up for a walk.

Instead of "fixing up," however, she flew to the Clymer street police station and told Capt. Sullivan her troubles. The captain sent two detectives to her house, but insisted that Mrs. Pasco remain in his office. The detectives found her smilingly waiting for them, and she told them that she was taking her husband to a walk.

Patrols in Police Station.

While tried to comfort the woman and tell her to run home, but she insisted on going to the station. "What do you mean by arresting my husband?" weepingly demanded the little woman when they arrived there. "Your husband? Why, he is a single man engaged to marry me, and he has stolen my diamonds."

"Engaged to you?" rejoined the little woman. "He is my husband, James Oakley, and the father of my children." "Exactly what was said after the marriage," said the detective, "and you are now engaged to marry me, and he has stolen my diamonds."

"Know now where you have been singing at night?" she screamed. Then Oakley expressed relief when he was locked up. The two women were escorted home under separate bodyguards.

HUNGRY, SO HE HURRIED.

Automobile, Arrested, Gives Excuse for Speeding.

Roy A. Rainey, of No. 125 West Fifty-seventh street, who owns an automobile, was arraigned before Magistrate Backus in the Centre Street Court to-day for speeding his machine last night on the northern driveway of the Brooklyn Bridge.

Policeman Ackerly said the machine was shooting along at the rate of twenty miles an hour. "How did you time it?" inquired the Magistrate of the policeman.

"The bridge cable runs between eleven and twelve miles an hour," replied Ackerly, "and the auto was beating the cable all hollow."

Rainey was coming home from the races and was hungry. He was hurrying so as not to cause a blockade on the bridge, as he feared a late dinner at the restaurant.

Magistrate Barlow held Rainey for trial in Special Sessions.

BOYS MUST LEARN SEWING.

WABASH, Ind., Sept. 28.—Every boy from the first grade to the highest in the Wabash city schools is determined that he will win the latest order of the "Boy's Sewing Club."

The school board says that every pupil as well as girl must learn to do plain sewing. "Only the boys in the High School are exempt, and they must learn to sew," says the board.

"MAY" WROTE M'NALLY NOTE

Police Seek a Young Woman Who Said She Was Going to Boston Just Before Liquor Dealer Was Shot to Death.

Capt. Formosa and his detectives are chasing a new clue in the McNally murder mystery, the starting point of the new trail being a note signed "May" found among McNally's effects. This note reads:

"I am going to take the Joy line for Boston Wednesday. I wish I could see you before I start. MAY."

The Boston police have been asked to aid in the search for this young woman. The police have discovered that a woman who lives in the Bedford section of Brooklyn, and who was much in McNally's company, has been missing several days, and she is believed to have gone to Boston.

The police are also investigating a number of fights which McNally had in his saloon during the past year. He was quick-tempered, and apparently enjoyed the fights which occurred frequently in his place.

Special Deputy Sheriff William Johnson, who may be called as a witness at the inquest, has left Brooklyn for Richmond, Va. By his own admission he caused some excitement in McNally's saloon on the Thursday morning preceding the murder by shooting up the place.

He said he had left McNally at 1:30 and gone to the Court-House, where he asked George Gebhard, an under janitor, to let him sleep on a bench. He says he slept there until 4 o'clock in the morning, and at 4:30 boarded a car on which he met Dr. Mangen. He was home at No. 36 North Oxford street when informed by his brother that McNally had been shot.

The time of the shooting is fixed by a bookie who heard the shots at 4:30, at which time Johnson, according to his story, was still in the Court-House. Johnson shot up the saloon with a 38-calibre revolver. McNally was slain with a 22-calibre revolver.

The building in which McNally's saloon is located, and in which he was murdered, seems to read under a hoodoo. It began shortly after the building was erected, when a young school teacher committed suicide by taking carbolic acid in one of the upper rooms.

Twelve years ago John Donovan, the first proprietor of the saloon, was shot by "Bully" Walsh, of Chester, Pa. Walsh served seven years and was discharged when dying of consumption. He died a few days after his release from prison.

WOMAN DRUGGED AND KIDNAPPED

Police Seek Men They Believe Decoyed Mrs. Fendel in Boston and Left Her Unconscious in New Jersey Woods.

In the finding of an unconscious woman, who said that her name was Fendel, and that she had come from Boston, in a lonely part of the woods at Bridgeport, N. J., the police of New York and Boston are today attempting to run down a gang of kidnapers and robbers who are believed to have kidnapped the woman in Boston, brought her through New York and, after robbing her, left her to die in the Bridgeport woods.

That a Mrs. Fendel had been kidnapped from Boston was first made known to the New York police by the appearance in New York on Tuesday of Mrs. Hinkle Fendel, the mother-in-law, and the two little children of the lost Mrs. Fendel, who applied to the Hebrew Shelter, No. 228 East Broadway, asking that they be provided for.

The mother-in-law said that she had lost her daughter-in-law and the mother of the two children with her in Boston, and that it was her belief that the woman had been kidnapped from Boston. The elder woman said that Mrs. Fendel had $100 in money and several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry in her possession when she disappeared.

Recently Came from Austria.

It was believed at first that the lost Mrs. Fendel, who had only recently arrived from Austria, would turn up sooner or later, and that she had simply lost her way in Boston. The theory that she had been kidnapped was not credited until to-day, when the police learned of the woman found unconscious in the woods at Bridgeport, N. J.

The story sent by the Bridgeport police convinces the police here that a bold kidnapping has been planned and executed. According to the statement of the Mrs. Fendel found unconscious in the woods, she left her two children and her mother-in-law to attend to some baggage, preparatory to the trip to New York.

She was accosted by two men who persuaded her that her baggage was in a house near by. After being lured to this house she remembers nothing until she was brought to consciousness in the woods near Bridgeport. Then she discovered that all her money and jewelry were gone.

Think Woman Was Drugged.

The Bridgeport police believe the woman was drugged or frightened into unconsciousness, was put upon a train and brought through New York and was then taken to Bridgeport, where she was deserted in the woods.

The mother-in-law and the children of Mrs. Fendel are still at the Hebrew Shelter. The mother and daughter-in-law is expected to be brought here to-day.

The Fendels are bound for St. Paul, Minn., where the husband of the younger woman and son of the elder is living. He sent his mother and wife and children money with which to make the trip to America and they landed in Boston.
